

Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA)

Decision notice

Date: 21 March 2017

Public Authority: Chief Constable of Merseyside Police
Address: Canning Place
Liverpool
Merseyside
L1 8JX

Decision (including any steps ordered)

1. The complainant has requested copies of the training materials used by Merseyside Police in its Workshop to Raise Awareness of Prevent ("WRAP") training sessions. Merseyside Police refused to disclose this information under the exemptions provided by sections 24(1) (national security), 31(1) (law enforcement) and 40 (personal information) of the FOIA.
2. The Commissioner's decision is that Merseyside Police was entitled to rely on section 24(1) to refuse to disclose the requested information.
3. The Commissioner requires no steps to be taken.

Background

4. "Prevent" is part of the Government's counter-terrorism strategy and its aim is "to stop people becoming terrorists or supporting terrorism."<sup>1</sup>
5. WRAP training session materials are devised and circulated to public bodies such as Merseyside Police, by the Home Office. The Commissioner has previously considered the question of access to WRAP training materials under decision notice FS50607018<sup>2</sup>. In that case, the Home Office gave the following description of the purpose of WRAP:

"The Counter-Terrorism and Security Act 2015 imposes a duty on specified authorities to have due regard to the need to prevent people from being drawn into terrorism. This is also known as the Prevent duty. This means reducing the risk of vulnerable people from radicalisation and the identification and referral of those considered to be at risk.

The Workshop to Raise Awareness of Prevent (WRAP) is a Home Office training package designed for front-line staff. It provides an overview of the Prevent Strategy and ways of identifying individuals vulnerable to radicalisation, as well as those seeking to radicalise others.

[WRAP] is aimed at public sector front line staff covered by the Prevent statutory duty, in both the private and public sector including; social services, the health sector, the education sector, the probation service, offender management units, family protection units and the police."

6. WRAP training is delivered only by accredited trainers and provided to front line staff who are subject to the Prevent duty, including, in this case, Merseyside Police.

Request and response

7. On 19 October 2015, the complainant wrote to Merseyside Police and requested information in the following terms:

"Officers from Merseyside Police are delivering Workshop to Raise Awareness of Prevent (WRAP) training sessions to staff in public sector and community organisations on the government's counter-terrorism Prevent strategy and 'radicalisation'.

I would be grateful for a copy of the standard presentation your officers currently deliver and clarification on the examples of 'domestic extremism' that they have highlighted when talking to participants (not simply 'left-wing extremism' or 'right-wing extremism' but the specific examples of campaigns or groups), during training held since January 2015.

8. Having informed the complainant that it needed additional time to consider public interest arguments, Merseyside Police responded to the request on 14 December 2015. It confirmed that it held information which fell within the scope of the request, but said that it was exempt from disclosure under sections 24(1) (national security), 31(1) (law enforcement) and 40 (personal information) of the FOIA. With regard to sections 24 and 31, it said the public interest in maintaining the exemptions was stronger than that in disclosing the information.
9. The complainant requested an internal review on 3 February 2016. Merseyside Police provided the outcome of the internal review on 2 March 2016. It upheld its decision to apply the aforementioned exemptions to withhold the requested information.

Scope of the case

10. The complainant contacted the Commissioner on 2 June 2016 to complain about Merseyside Police's decision to continue to withhold information in response to the exemptions at 24(1), 31(1) and 40 of the FOIA.
11. During the Commissioner's investigation Merseyside Police amended its position. It informed the Commissioner that it in fact held two sets of training materials which fell within the scope of the request. One set was provided to it by the Home Office. Merseyside Police maintained its position that this was exempt from disclosure under the aforementioned exemptions.
12. However, Merseyside Police also held anti-extremism training materials which it had developed, which were different from the Home Office training materials. On reflection, and having consulted with the Home Office, it considered that this second set of training materials was not exempt from disclosure by virtue of the aforementioned exemptions. It therefore disclosed this second set of anti-extremism training materials to the complainant during the investigation.
13. In view of this disclosure, this decision notice has only considered the decision by Merseyside Police to exempt from disclosure the WRAP training materials provided by the Home Office.

Reasons for decision

Section 24 – national security

14. Merseyside Police cited section 24(1), which provides an exemption from the duty to disclose where this is reasonably required for the purposes of national security. Consideration of this exemption involves two stages; first, the exemption must be engaged due to the requirements of national security. Secondly, this exemption is qualified by the public interest, which means that the information must be disclosed if the public interest in the maintenance of the exemption does not outweigh the public interest in disclosure.

15. The Commissioner interprets "required" as used in section 24 to mean "reasonably necessary". The exemption will, therefore, be engaged if it is reasonably necessary for the purpose of safeguarding national security for the requested information to be withheld.
16. Merseyside Police's reasons for the citing this exemption concerned the need to protect the integrity and credibility of the WRAP training programme, as well as the quality with which WRAP training is delivered and its efficacy in preventing extremism. It said that releasing the training materials into the public domain risked elements of them being taken out of context, or used without authorisation in an uncontrolled fashion, which could discredit and undermine the effectiveness of WRAP training and the Prevent programme. It also argued that the content of the training would be useful to those wishing to take action to counteract the effectiveness of Prevent.
17. Merseyside Police explained that the presentation slides and related videos for WRAP training are made available by the Home Office on the strict understanding that they be accessed and used only by accredited deliverers of WRAP training. Merseyside Police is subject to a formal confidentiality agreement with the Home Office in this regard. The Home Office retains significant control over the content of the materials and how they may be used. Merseyside Police said that the presentation was unaltered from what the Home Office had provided to it. It commented that the strict access controls afforded to WRAP training materials enable the Home Office to ensure consistent and controlled delivery of the training materials it supplies across multiple sectors.
18. Merseyside Police believed that disclosure of the requested information could be harmful to the success of the WRAP training, and thus, the Prevent strategy, in several ways. Firstly, it believed that disclosure may lead to the training materials being delivered by unauthorised providers in a manner that did not meet the standards required by the originators of the material (the Home Office) and that this would harm the efficacy of the training, which would be detrimental to the Prevent strategy.
19. Merseyside Police also believed that disclosure could lead to groups or individuals who could be characterised as having an "anti-Prevent" agenda, seeking to discredit or undermine the training materials. It could also provide useful intelligence to extremists seeking to avoid coming to the attention of the Prevent programme. All of these outcomes would ultimately be harmful to the effectiveness of the Prevent strategy.

20. The Commissioner has examined Merseyside Police's reasons for considering that section 24 applies. The arguments it has provided concern disclosure being detrimental to the Prevent strategy, the aim of which is to prevent terrorism. As such, they are clearly relevant to national security, which is at the heart of section 24.
21. However, as set out at paragraph 15, above, section 24 will only be engaged if exemption from disclosure is "reasonably necessary" for the purpose of safeguarding national security.
22. Merseyside Police confirmed that the WRAP training materials were unaltered from the version provided to it by the Home Office. The Commissioner has previously considered those materials in the decision notice referred to in paragraph 5, above. In that case, following a demonstration of the training and having viewed the training materials, the Commissioner recognised the importance of those materials, which concern a very sensitive subject, being delivered in the manner approved by the Home Office. Regard has therefore been had to submissions made by the Home Office on that subject.
23. On the issue of the likelihood of any party seeking to use these materials to attack the aims of Prevent, a cursory internet search reveals that Prevent is a controversial strategy which has attracted criticism from some quarters. There are individuals and groups who question its approach (the complainant himself voiced concerns in his complaint to the Commissioner about erroneous assumptions he believes the training perpetuates) and some are openly hostile to it. Amongst the latter are groups that have campaigned against it. The Commissioner accepts that such groups are likely to seek to highlight in response to disclosure what they regard as flaws or particularly controversial aspects of the training materials. This, in turn may result in detriment to the effectiveness with which WRAP training can divert vulnerable individuals from extremism of all kinds.
24. Furthermore, in any case where the possible release of counter-terrorist related recorded information is under consideration, the likelihood of those materials being exploited by extremist individuals and groups will be relevant. In this case, as well as the parties referred to in the preceding paragraph that have a particular objection to Prevent, it is likely that there would be extremist individuals and groups that would seek to exploit the disclosure of the information in question, to the detriment of the Government's counter-terrorist efforts.
25. A counter argument against withholding the requested information could be made that its content is disclosed each time the training is delivered.

The Commissioner recognises that those who have received the training will have some knowledge of the content of the information, but the Commissioner does not consider this to be equivalent to its full and unrestricted disclosure into the public domain in response to a request made under the FOIA.

26. The Commissioner has considered whether it would be possible to disclose a redacted version of the requested information, rather than withholding it in its entirety. However, the Commissioner considers that redaction and a partial disclosure would not be practicable in this case. The nature of the information means that it would not be possible to redact part of the content whilst still addressing the concerns set out above.
27. Taking all the above into account, the Commissioner's view is that in this case, exemption from the duty to disclose in relation to the information in question is reasonably required for the purposes of national security. She therefore considers that the exemption provided by section 24(1) of the FOIA is engaged.

Balance of the public interest

28. Section 24 is a qualified exemption and so it is nevertheless necessary to consider whether the public interest favours maintaining the exemption or disclosing the information.
29. In forming a conclusion on the balance of the public interest in this case, the Commissioner has taken into account the considerable public interest inherent in the maintenance of the particular exemption, as well as the specific factors that apply in relation to the requested information.

Public interest arguments favouring disclosure

30. The arguments considered in this decision notice surround the need to protect the requested information due to its subject matter. However, conversely, the Commissioner recognises that there is also a strong public interest in disclosure of the requested information because of its subject matter. The Commissioner's view is that any information that details the anti-terrorist efforts being made by the Government will be the subject of considerable public interest in order to improve knowledge, understanding and confidence in the work being undertaken by the Government in this vital area.
31. In this case there is also a particular public interest in the disclosure of the specific materials in question. The controversy relating to WRAP training and Prevent is touched on in paragraph 23, above. The Commissioner's view is that there is a public interest in the disclosure of the WRAP training materials, in order that the public can assess whether the controversy relating to this matter is justified. The combined weight of these public interest factors in favour of disclosure is considerable.

Public interest arguments favouring maintaining the exemption

32. In any situation where section 24(1) is found to be engaged, the Commissioner must recognise the public interest inherent in this exemption. Safeguarding national security is a matter of the most fundamental public interest; its weight can be matched only where there are also equally fundamental public interests in favour of disclosure of the requested information.
33. In this case the public interest in the maintenance of the exemption concerns preserving the ability of the Home Office (as the originator of the WRAP training material) and the Government as a whole, to pursue their anti-terrorism strategies. The Commissioner finds the public interest in these efforts not being undermined or circumvented weighs overwhelmingly in favour of the maintenance of the exemption.
34. In conclusion, the Commissioner has recognised public interest of considerable weight in favour of disclosure given the subject matter of the requested information. She does not, however, believe that it matches the weight of the public interest in avoiding a disclosure that could be detrimental to national security. The finding of the Commissioner is, therefore, that the public interest in the maintenance of the exemption outweighs the public interest in disclosure and that Merseyside Police was not obliged to disclose the requested information.
35. As the Commissioner has determined that Merseyside Police was entitled to rely upon section 24 to withhold the information in its entirety, she has not gone on to consider the other exemptions it cited.
