Papua New Guinea (with reservation)†	27 Jan., 1982
Saint Vincent and the Grenadines	9 Nov., 1981
Sri Lanka	18 Feb., 1982
* The instrument of accession of the People's Republic of China contains the following statement and reservation:
[Translation]
1. The signing and ratification of the said Convention by the Taiwan authorities in the name of China are illegal and null and void.
2. The People's Republic of China has reservations on the provisions of Article 22 of the Convention and will not be bound by it.
† The instrument of accession of the Government of Papua New Guinea contains the following reservation:
“The Government of Papua New Guinea interprets Article 4 of the Convention as requiring a party to the Convention to adopt further legislative measures in the areas covered by subparagraphs (a), (b) and (c) of that article only in so far as it may consider with due regard to the principles contained in the Universal Declaration set out in Article 5 of the Convention that some legislative addition to, or variation of existing law and practice, is necessary to give effect to the provisions of Article 4. In addition, the Constitution of Papua New Guinea guarantees certain fundamental rights and freedoms to all persons irrespective of their race or place of origin. The Constitution also provides for judicial protection of these rights and freedoms. Acceptance of this Convention does not therefore indicate the acceptance of obligations by the Government of Papua New Guinea which go beyond those provided by the Constitution, nor does it indicate the acceptance of any obligation to introduce judicial process beyond that provided by the Constitution.”

Upon accession to the above Covenant on 21 December, 1978, the Government of Trinidad and Tobago made the following reservation inter alia (See Treaty Series No. 53 (1979), Cmnd. 7624 p. 18):
“(i) The Government of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago reserves the right not to apply in full the provision of paragraph 2 of article 4 of the Covenant since section 7 (3) of its Constitution enables Parliament to enact legislation even though it is inconsistent with sections (4) and (5) of the said Constitution;"

In a notification received on 21 April, 1982, the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany informed the Secretary-General of the United Nations of the following:

"The Government of the Federal Republic of Germany objects to the above-cited reservation. In the opinion of the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany it follows from the text and the history of the Covenant that the said reservation is incompatible with the object and purpose of the Covenant."

[Translation]
In pursuance of Article 14, paragraph 1, the Luxembourg Government reserves the right to apply Article 2 of the Convention in such a way that maternal affiliation follows automatically only from indication of the mother's name on the child's birth certificate, provided however that maternal affiliation may nevertheless be established judicially by means of a maternal affiliation suit if it proved by due legal process that the child concerned is the one to whom the alleged mother gave birth.
In application of the same Article, the Luxembourg Government reserves the right not to apply:
(a) Article 3 of the Convention in the case provided for by Article 334 (7) of the Civil Code whereby if there exists between the father and the mother of a natural child one of the impediments to marriage provided for by Articles 161 and 162 on grounds of relationship, affiliation being already established in regard to the one, it is prohibited to establish affiliation in regard to the other;
(b) Article 4 of the Convention in the case provided for by Article 335 (2) of the Civil Code whereby when a child was conceived as the result of an act of violence committed against the mother, affiliation is subject to the mother's consent. In such a case, paternal affiliation recognised without the mother's consent shall be void and shall be annulled upon application by the mother or by the public prosecutor.
